FIRST EUROPEAN CLOUDSTACK CONFERENCE, 20-22 NOVEMBER Leading users, developers and strategists meet in Amsterdam

AMSTERDAM, 15 October 2013 - Cloud is gaining momentum big time and CloudStack is one of the leading open source platforms for building and managing clouds. From 20 to 22 November leading European cloud developers and users meet in Amsterdam. Aimed at users, developers and everybody else interested in CloudStack, this will be the place to learn more about CloudStack or join the developers to discuss the past, present and future. Following two very successful collaboration events in the United States, this is the first conference of its kind in Europe. The European CloudStack conference will continue with the best ideas from the previous conferences and feature a varied set of presentations.

The line-up of speakers for Amsterdam includes Chip Childers, VP Apache Cloudstack project, Paula Gould from GreenCloud, Noa Resare from Spotify, cloud-architect Paul Angus from ShapeBlue, DevOps of the first hour Patrick Debois, John Turner and Noel King from Paddy Power, John Willis from Dell (previous Enstratus), Darren Shepherd, senior principal engineer at Citrix and Hugo Trippiers from Schuberg Philis.

A lot of the talks and events at the conference will provide ample opportunity to meet with the cloudstack community and engage in deep discussions with developers and users. The hack-a-thon day will provide an excellent opportunity to turn ideas into practice together with the committers and the sponsors.

Apache CloudStack is open source software designed to deploy and manage large networks of virtual machines, as a highly available, highly scalable Infrastructure as a Service (IaaS) cloud computing platform. CloudStack is used by high-end service providers to offer public cloud services, and by many companies to provide an on-premises (private) cloud offering, or as part of a hybrid cloud solution.
